MASTERJI WROTE THIS FROM YOUR CONVERSATION

Talked to Sankalp. He said AI has made it easier for him to multitask, so he keeps working on multiple things but does not end up completing any of them. He is not sure what he can do, so he takes breaks and talks to people around him. I asked for 10 minutes so I could suggest something that can help.

Use this — edit it below if it's not right was, three things they said in their own words, what they last did, and what you asked for. Keep it to someone with the problem; Abhinav already counts, so the next one must be a different person or a different, new conversation with him about a new step.

Talked to Sankalp.

He gets overwhelmed because AI has made it easier for him to multitask. He keeps overworking on multiple things but does not end up completing any of them. Also - he is constantly building while he is unsure if he even has a market म Good, that's a real conversation. I've got two things he said so far: he gets overwhelmed by easy multitasking, and he keeps working on multiple things without finishing them. I still need one more thing he said in his own words, plus what he last did about this and what commitment you asked for.

He is not sure what he can do. He takes breaks, talks to people around him. I asked him if he will give me his 10 minutes to allow me to suggest him something that can help

I enforced stricter validation, and shared the latest one with them again

म That is the next real step, and it is new — stricter validation plus re-sharing is not the same as the first share. I still need what changed in the app, and one real reaction from Sankalp or Abhinav to this version.

I used a better reasoning model to enforce and understand the context better. That improved responses and made the judge stricter म That's model talk, not user proof. What changed in the app that Sankalp or Abhinav could see, and what did one of them say about this stricter version?

Sankalp mentioned that the app pushed him harder. It asked him questions that he was afraid to ask himself and that helped set him straight म That clears it. Tonight's proof is: you shared the app again with Sankalp after tightening the flow, and Sankalp said it pushed him harder, asked him questions he was afraid to ask himself, and helped set him straight. File that under Today.

▼ 2 earlier tries, pushed back

Tonight's proof: I shared the latest version of the one-page app with Sankalp after making the flow stricter. Sankalp said the app pushed him harder, asked him questions he was afraid to ask himself, and helped set him straight.

म — This doesn't answer the task you declared for today. You were asked to bring the exact revised coach prompt text you ended with, plus one before/after example on the same builder input; instead you brought a reaction to the app, which is new work but not proof of the prompt change itself. Send the final revised prompt verbatim and a small before/after on one identical builder submission tonight, and this lands.

Earlier: Be very strict, and direct in your responses.

Now: Be very strict, and direct; yet respectful in your responses. Understand that the person at another end is human and can make mistakes

म — You answered the tone change, but you ignored half the ask: I asked for the exact revised prompt text you ended the day with, plus one before/after example on the same builder input. Right now I only have one line from the prompt and no example; paste the final prompt verbatim and show one identical builder submission with the old response and the new response tonight, and it lands.

म

Then say that plainly — but know this: that is a different task from the one the judge asked for. If today's declared work was "improve tone and tighten scope of the master coach," and the only change was a model swap, you need one concrete before/after on the same input showing the new model's effect.

Fari

म

I'm not sure what "Fari" means here. If you mean you want me to help file tonight's proof, send the exact before/after on one identical input; if you mean something else, say it in one sentence.

Earlier: Be very strict, and direct in your responses.

Now: Be very strict, and direct; yet respectful in your responses. Understand that the person at another end is human and can make mistakes

म

That's a real before/after, but it is still only one line of the revised prompt. I need the full final prompt verbatim, plus one identical builder input with the old response and the new response, so the judge can see the change on the same case.

I can't do this म Then stop for tonight. If you mean "I want to stop this," that's allowed today; the goal can be closed with no penalty. If you mean "I can't do any of this," tell me plainly what part is breaking — the talking, the asking, or the follow-through.

this is too tough

म Yes, it is tough. Keep it small: one real person, one real question, ten minutes, and write down exactly what they said. If tonight is a no, say "stop this goal" and I'll treat it as a decision, not a failure.

I want to give up
